FALSE.

Mr. Levi A. Miller and Col. George A. Bayard think a deal more of Irishmen now-a-days than they did in 1864 or '5, when they engaged in the disreputable business of groaning before the Catholic Church. Perhaps they have forgotten this, but Irishmen havn't.—Watchman.

We copy the above from the Watchman. It is needless for us to say that it is a contemptable falsehood. We do not call the attention of our readers to this little squib because we think there is any merit in it, Oh! no. But to show to what base uses we may be brought, when once we are a candidate. Now the fact that the Watchman has no charge to bring against our candidates except false ones, is very good evidence that we have the very best men up for office, which is a fact that even the Watchman cannot deny, and that paper will generally deny anything that has even one grain of truth in it, as for instance, the time when it denied the existance of a law after we had published it twice, stating what year it was passed, where it might be found, &c. But the reason for their blindness was apparent to everybody. Meek voted for the law. It gave laboring men all over the state the right to meet and organize into societies, but Meek had Centre and Clearfield counties excepted, so that in these two counties the same rights were not accorded to the laboring men that were accorded to them in every other county in the state, and they can thank the Hon. Editor of the Watchman for that. This puny statesman. This would-be Senator.

But to return to the subject at the head of this article. If there is the slightest foundation for this falsehood it rests upon these facts.

During the campaign referred to a procession was formed at the Republican Head-quarters, for the purpose of meeting and escorting the several delegations from adjoining twps. to the place of holding the meeting. It so happened that a portion of the Spring and Walker delegations were met in front of the "Catholic Church." As was the custom on such occasions, three cheers and a "tiger" were given as the delegations met. "Tiger" was not groans as the Watchman would have its readers believe, but a final clincher to the cheer, or the out pouring of loyal hearts filled full to overflowing with patriotic enthusiasm.

How could these delegations avoid congratulating each other when they met even to the giving of the "tiger?" But to be serious, we should think it the height of folly for any sect to allow their prejudices to become arroused to gratify the designs of bad men who are not even members of the church, and we believe those who are good citizens and good Catholics will treat this base malicious slander, with the contempt it deserves, and not thank the Watchman either for dragging their church into notice in connection with politics.

SHALL WE HAVE A TEMPERANCE PARTY?

We publish this week on our inside an article entitled "Temperance Politics." While we are willing to let all sides be heard, and while we are willing to do all we can to advance so good a cause as the temperance reform, we must plead guilty to being among those who "hold up their hands in holy horror," at the idea of starting a third or temperance party. We sincerely believe that no movement could be started at the present time so detrimental to the cause of temperance as a movement of this kind. What is to be gained by such a turn of affairs? We answer, absolutely nothing. While the good that has been already done will have become by such an act, neutralized, and the glorious temperance cause will have been stabbed in the house of its friends. Any one who will stop to think just one moment candidly, and without prejudice, will see at a glance that such a party must of necessity be weak and powerless, while the temperance element, which now has to a certain extent, a controling influence in the Republican party, will have become just so much weakened. Again, nothing would so much please the whisky men, for the moment such a party is started the victory is theirs, and the temperance men are routed. horse, foot, and dragoon, and whisky candidates will be elected to every position of trust and honor in the state, and the temperance reform will have been set back at least twenty years. They have fought this same ground over in the eastern states (we mean down in Yankee-land) and with the very same humiliating result which we have here depicted, and that will be the result here unless a spirit of moderation shall control the counsels of the temperance men. We fear that the men who advocate this third party movement have not really counted the cost. At the election last spring there were but about thirty-five hundred votes cast, while at the election last fall there were over 7,000 votes cast. Now it will be seen by this that there are in the county at least 3,500 who do not feel interest enough in the temperance question to vote either one way or the other. Of the 3,500 that did vote, 1,005 declared for license, and 2,495 against, so that out of a vote of 7,000 there are only 2,495 earnest temperance men. Now if a third party is started they cannot expect to get any of the 3,500 indifferent men, but on the contrary by such a course they will turn all this strength over to their open and avowed opponents. The 1,005 who voted for license, and the 2,495 who are now able to control the county in favor of temperance, would become utterly powerless and unable to accomplish anything. Then again, is it reasonable to suppose that even the 2,495 who voted against license last spring would all be willing to break old party ties and join a third party movement? We think not. We think it more than probable that such a party would not get 300 votes in the whole county. Our advice is to the temperance democrats to vote for the temperance men that are put upon the republican ticket, while to the Republicans we say stand firm, present in unbroken front to the enemy, for the only hope for the ultimate success of the temperance cause is in the complete triumph of the Republican party. Make the majorities so large that they can grapple this giant evil, and there is no doubt but that they will do it, and do it effectually.

We are glad to see that the nomination of John Irwin is being received very favorably all over the district, and even our opponants speak in the most favorable terms of our candidate. By this we see the wisdom of our choice, and it only remains for every republican to do his duty to make his election sure beyond a doubt. This election is one of the most important that we have ever had in the counties comprising this district. Let us make a good run and roll up a good large republican majority, and place this district which has been considered to be by some doubtful, and by our opponants as democratic on the list as one of the good true republican districts. If we do it this time it will settle the matter for all times. Let every republican do his duty is all we ask. Below we give extracts from republicans papers showing how this nomination is received by our friends all along the line.

John Irwin, Jr., of Centre county, as the nominee for State Senator.—Mr. Irwin is an urbane and modest gentleman, who is well known to many of the citizens of our county. He is popular at home, and will run a heavy vote in Centre, and in fact throughout the balance of the district. He is honest, unassuming, and well qualifed. It will require work—heavy work—to secure his election in this district, but if our party will go to work with a will it can be done.—Huntingdon Journal.

The Republican Conference of the Centre, Huntingdon, Mifflin and Juniata district, met at Tyrone, on Thursday last, and nominated John Irwin, of Centre. Mr. Irwin is one of the most competent Republicans of the district and is deservedly popular at home.—Blair County Radical.

With Mr. Irwin we have no personal acquaintance, but we learn he is a very good man, fully competent to represent us in the Senate, and true to the principles of the party. We hoist his name with pleasure, and cordially recommend him to the support of all true Republicans.—Huntingdon Globe.

Mr. John Irwin, Jr., of Bellefonte, Centre county, was last Thursday nominated as a candidate for State Senate, by the Republican Conference that assembled on that day at Tyrone for the purpose of making a Senatorial nomination. It would have pleased the Republicans of Juniata to have had the nomination rest on their candidate.—The Conference, however, thought it proper to give it to Centre county. Mr. Irwin should have the united efforts of the party of October election.—Juniata Sentinal.

—The Democracy of Pennsylvania appear to be lamentably short of material. Dr. Andrew Nebinger was temporary chairman of the State Convention; Dr. Andrew Nebinger was permanent President of the convention and Dr. Andrew Nebinger is chairman of the State Committee. There appears, in fact, to be no one of any note in the Democratic party but Dr. Andrew Nebinger. "Alas! How are the mighty fallen!

A VOTE for Gramley this fall is a vote in favor of honesty and efficiency in the administration of our county affairs, and against the corruption and imbecility now reigning at the Court House. The Centre Hall Reporter says that Sankey deserves the gratitude of every honest man because he approved the fencing of the grounds back of the Court House into a park, at an expense of $15,000 to the county. It is indeed surprising that the man who uses the people's money to establish newspapers, should have refused to sanction any extravagance that might have been asked of him. Perhaps we may also be thankful that he has not made a park of every farm in Centre county. We can only explain his not making a park back of the Court House because it would not pay as good per cent. as investing in Republican (?) newspapers.

The county is out of debt, but notwithstanding that they propose to raise by tax, fifty-six thousand dollars this year. And what for? Is it possible that they want more newspapers in other parts of the county? Perhaps they will this year start one at Centre Hall and at Millheim to run in opposition to the Democratic papers that are now there. It will make things so interesting, "you know," and then as the county pays for them by advertising, it is a "soft snap" for this good man Sankey, because he, with two or three more who belong to the ring here in Bellefonte, will finally own office, papers, material and all, and in the intervening time receive $400 yearly rental for $300 worth of material.

If the Democratic papers, and the honest Democrats over the mountain are willing to be imposed upon in this way, all they have to do is to elect this man Sankey again. It is a good thing for Meek—he is one of the ring, but if we are not very much mistaken it will prove to be a very bitter pill to the taxpayers all over the county, and especially to the Democrats and Democratic papers on the other side of the big hill.—We warn you, gentlemen. It is a scheme to concentrate all the power in the hands of a few men here in Bellefonte, and although it is intended to have the effect to breed discord and trouble in what you style the "Radical" camp. It is also intended to break down all opposition to the ring from whatever quarter it may come.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the REPUBLICAN.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 13, 1873.

The charge of intermeddling with the affairs of the individual States and of attempting to control local politics has been so frequently made against President Grant's administration by the opposition press and so often embodied in Democratic platforms, and that too without a shadow of foundation, that the country has come to conclude that there is no truth whatever in it. Everywhere the Democrats cry out "federal interference," and especially is this the case where they are beaten, or where they are likely to be beaten.

But when the charge comes from Relicans it begins to assume a deeper meaning. The Massachusetts Republicans must have meant something by the second resolution adopted at Worcester. Let us inquire into their meaning, and first let us quote the resolution in question. It reads thus: "Resolved, That while we recognize the full right of every citizen to express and act upon his convictions upon all questions of public interest, no persons holding public office has the right to seek to influence the action of his subordinates by exciting fear of loss of place if their opinions and actions shall differ from his own, and we call upon the President further to remove all public officers who have improperly interfered with the independence of the Republicans of Massachusetts in the management of their local concerns whenever the fact is proved to his satisfaction."

To obtain a complete understanding of the meaning of this resolution we must bring to mind the circumstances that led to its adoption. It has been asserted that all the federal officials in Massachusetts have been working in the interests of Butler, and it is therefore inferred from this apparently concerted action that the head or dispenser of federal patronage was the moving power. Whether the fact was true that all federal officials were Butler men we have no satisfactory evidence, though it seems quite evident that a large majority were earnest workers in the interests of the "claimant," as he is called. But admitting (for the sake of gaining a point for discussion) that each and every man holding office under the general government and stationed in Massachusetts worked with might and main for Butler's success, what does it prove? It would not be an irrational conclusion that there was some power behind them that moved them to such actions, for we cannot conceive that such harmony of opinion could occur among men of one class, while other classes differ so widely. Let us admit that there was a power somewhere, let us even admit that the force used to manufacture this concert of action was the fear of removal from office; still this does not prove that President Grant or any of his cabinet (that is the administration) had anything to do with it. It is just as reasonable, and rather more so, to conclude that the power in question was Butler himself. If there were open threats or secret intimations of removal in case these federal officials should oppose him it is very likely they came from the "claimant" and not from any member of the cabinet. From what we know of the character of Butler he would seem to be a man capable of such action. The probabilities are that our Massachusetts brethern have allowed themselves to be misled by listening to the unfounded complaints of the Democracy. Before we should conclude that the President has sanctioned any meddling with the affairs of Massachusetts we should demand better evidence of the fact.

It must not be forgotten that the principle laid down in the resolution above quoted agrees exactly with the spirit of the revised civil service rules, and that these rules owe their existance to President Grant, the man charged with the violation of the principle. The very design of civil service reform was to prevent the evil of which the Democrats everywhere and the Republicans of Massachusetts complain. The intention was to free officials from the slavish fear of yoke and the lash, and every act of President Grant has demonstrated his sincerity in the establishment of the rules.

The usual monotony of official routine in the State and Treasury Departments was broken on the 9th inst. by the final settlement of the Geneva Award. The great transaction was effected somewhat after the following manner; The British minister, Sir Edward Thornton, and Counsul General Archibald presented themselves at the Treasury Department and transfered the Treasurer a lot of cetificates of coin deposits amounting in the aggregate to $15,500,000, the sum of the Geneva Award. In return for these certificates the Treasurer gave the officials of Great Britain an order on the United States Treasury for the aforesaid sum to be paid in gold. Thus far, we have merely a swapping of papers; the business is of a diplomatic character, and the actual payment must be made to the Secretary of State. Hence, Mr. Thornton presented himself at the State Department, and after mutual salutions between officials he said in a familliar way to Mr. Fish "I beleive my government owes the United States a sum of money which it is my purpose to pay to-day. If you will give me pen and ink I will soon settle this outstanding indebtedness." The efficient Secretary had the groose-quill and writing-fluid forthcoming eo instanti, and the British Minister took out his gold certificate received from Treasurer Spinner and indorsed it over to Secretary Fish, who give him a receipt for payment in full of the Geneva Award, and thus the books of Uncle Sam and John Bull were squared. Mr. Fish then took the gold certificate to the Treasury and requested him to invest it in the new five per cent bonds of the Funded loan under the act of Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury directed that a bond of $15,500,000 be issued, which was accordingly done, when it was photographed and then sent to Secretary Fish, who is its present custodian. The Secretary of the Treasury retained the certificate of deposit, and it will be framed and preserved among the archives of the government as a memorial of the amicable settlement of the difference between the two countries without resort to arms.

Who that has a drop of patriotic blood in his viens, or a spark of sympathy for humanity in general in his heart, does not realize a sense of relief and gratitude in contemplating the course of events of which the quiet proceedings above narrated form the peaceful consummation? Relief in the fact that war and its concomitant train of evils have been averted, gratitude in the fact that an important step has been made in the interest of nationas, a precedent established, the influence of which, extending down through the ages to come, is beyond all calculation, and in the fact that a better feeling exists to-day between the citizens of the two great nations concerned than could have possibly resulted in any other way.

Some few newspaper writers and low politicians have made weak attempts to critisize and deride the administration for the course it has pursued with England, but despite all such efforts the name of General Grant will be remembered and his action in this transaction approved as long as this republic stands; not because he is a Republican President, nor because of any admiration for him personally, but because his name is intimately connected with a transaction between England and the United States, which, upon its own face, shows it to have been dictated by enlightened reason and a sense of justice, not only on the part of our officials, but those of England also, which place their characters in beautiful contrast with the bulldog ferocity exhibited by other men on similar occasions.

—A dispatch from Governor Burbanb, of Dakota Territory, to President Grant was received yesterday afternoon stating that General Edwin T. McCook, of the United States army, was assassinated on Thursday night at a public meeting in Yankton by one P. P. Wintermute, a banker. No particulars were given.

—The Secretary of War yesterday issued an order revoking a previous order relating to the sending of bulky packages of mail matter by express. It will be remembered that both the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury issued instructions to their subordinates to send large package by express, when it could be done so much cheaper than by mail. This called forth some severe criticism from the press and was also opposed by the Postmaster General. The First Comptroller of the Treasury was called upon for an opinion as to the proper construction of the act appropriating money for the expense of postage for the departments, and he gave it as his opinion that such money could be used for no other purpose than the payment of postage. This is the cause of the rescinding of the previous order by the Secretary of War.

—The War Department officials are engaged in examining bids for furnishing headstones for the graves of soldiers interred in the national cemeteries. The amount appropriated for this purpose was one million dollars. Of upwards of one hundred bids received fourteen come within the appropiation. One of these is for Italian marble, the headstones to be cut out and prepared in Italy and then shipped in their finished condition to this country. There are others for Vermont and Tennessee marbles and for Maine and Richmond granites. No decision has as yet been arrived at.

—Postmastsr Filley, of St. Louis, having been charged with collecting assessments of money from his subordinates for political and other purposes in violation of the civil service regulations, (a communication from a number of clerks so assessed having been received at the Post Office Department,) he has telegraphed to the Postmaster General asking for an investigation, which will no doubt be granted

STATE NEWS.

—A fellow not a thousand miles from Somerset, stole a widow's calf. She sued him and recovered the calf and $30. So much for trifling with a woman's calves.

—A disease has broken out among the cows of Lancaster county, the symptoms of which are simalar to those of the epizooty. It has proven fatal in a number of cases.

—The Democratic plan of putting down railroad monopolies is to run the managers of railroad corporations as their candidates for the chief offices of the Commonwealth.

—Col. Alex. Bobb is the Republican candidate for Sheriff in Blair county. The democrats have sent up a Rocket after him, but he will come down a mere stick. He can't defeat Alex; no sirre, Bobb.

—Another Democratic paper comes to the rescue. The Hollidaysburg Standard defends the Hon. Back-pay Speer, and denounces the Blair County Democratic Convention for passing a resolution against him.

—An important letter has been received from the destinguished German geographer, Dr. Peterman, in which the scientific and geographical results of Captain Hall's Polar Expedition are characterized as the greatest yet attained

—A complaint known as "Dengue," or breakbone fever, which is said to suck all the strength out of the spinal column, is reported to be extensively prevailing in the Western States. The Democracy of Pennsylvania have got it also very badly.

—A magnificent new Hebrew Temple was dedicated at Titusville recently. It is a remarkable fact that the number of these edifices are being greatly increased in all parts of the country, and that the Jews, in the splendor of their temples of worship, are rivaling the most gorgeous of the Christian denominations.

——Mr. Samuel Beaver, an old citizen of Haines twp., died suddenly during last Monday night. Mr. Beaver had been plowing on Monday and went to bed as usual, without complaining of any illness. Next morning when his wife wanted to waken him, he had slept the sleep that knows no awakening—her husband was dead.

—Major Wilson, of Beaver Dam, probably aware that editors seldom have anything choice to eat, presented the hungry proprietors of the Altoona Tribune with a nineteen pound box of honey, and Tuckahoe thereupon rejoiceth, having never seen the like before.

He has reason to rejoice with exceeding great joy; but what makes the Major so "sweet" on the Tribune?

—A young New Yorker, spending a month with his uncle over in Blair County, wrote thus to his mother: "The peach trees here are too slippery for me to climb; uncle won't let me sail boats in the milk pans; there's no birds' nests around that I can see; Sallie Law spilt molasses on my best pants; a smaller boy than I am, who plays with me, wears a gold chain, and I want to go home."

—A correspondent informs the Clearfield Raftsman's Journal that a diabolical attempt at wholesale murder was made in Huston twp., this county, on Saturday evening, September 6th: "While the Good Templar Lodge was in session at Mill Run, an explosion of powder occurred beneath the floor of the school house in which the organization met, with sufficient force to tip over the tables and lamps, while the fire burst through the crevices in the floor and filled the house with stifling smoke. A further examination by daylight revealed the fact that the building had been lifted enough to allow the foundation to be pushed out of place. A powder can, that would hold about 25 pounds, was found under the house torn to pieces. Bushes had been cut and placed over the opening made in the wall to introduce the can. The floor being a double one, it was strong enough to withstand the shock—even to slightly lifting the house and pushing out the wall—thus enabling the power to expend its force laterally, and thwarting the evident intention to blow up fifeteen or twenty men and women." No punishment under our laws is too severe for such a dastardly outrage, and we hope, the fiends who made this attempt to injure and maim, or destroy the lives of so large a number of innocent persons, assembled in a peaceful and social capacity, may be discovered and punished to the utmost extent of the law.

Poetry.

LOVES LAST RELIC.

Only a little silken curl,
Cut from the head of a laughing girl
In happy long ago;
But alas! the laughing girl is dead,
And from my life the light is fled,
For, O! I loved her so!

Only a little lock of hair
That crowned my darling bright and fair
Before Death's parting blow;
Yet it brings me back her vanished charms,
Her pressing lips and clinging arms,
For, O! I loved her so!

Only a little golden tress
That used my sweet one's cheek to press,
And o'er her shoulders flow;
But looking back through long-gone years,
A holy thing that tress appears,
For, O! I loved her so!

Only a little sunny shread
By which my heart was captive led
In happy youth—and lo!
It still leads on through grief and pain
To where the parted meet again,
For, O! I loved her so!

Only a little ringlet fair,
Only a dead girl's glossy hair.
But words could not bestow
Treasures enough to fill its place
And summon back the one lost face
That I have worshipped so!

HENRI;

OR

THE WEB AND WOOF OF LIFE.

BY WILLIAM G. CAMBRIDGE.

CHAPTER XXII.—CONTINUED.

This was a reception I had not dreamed of, and it was some days before I could summon sufficient courage to approach again the delicate subject. After repeatedly urgent requests, she consented to take a walk with me to visit our old familiar haunts. It was a beautiful summer evening, and the sun was sinking to his rest. Not a cloud was in the sky, and everything was hushed into stillness. She provokingly refused to take my arm, preferring as she said, to walk alone, being so much accustomed to it. We wandered from spot to spot, where we had often been before; and, as we conversed of those dear old times, reserve and coldness seemed to leave us, and we were to each other what we had been. She was again my own Helen; and when I took her arm and placed it within mine, she made no resistance, but seemed pleased to have it there.

We walked on, until we came to the dearest spot of all. It was at the foot of a green hill, where a limpid stream of water flowed down its sides, and made beautiful all the valley below. Here was a very large rock, some fifty feet high. It was solid granite. At its base, fronting the valley, was a niche, so designed as to make a convenient seat for two. It had the appearance of having been formed by the hand of man. In front of this seat were a number of maple-trees, a few rods apart, in the form of a half-circle. The brook leaped down at one side of the rock, wound around it near its base, also in the form of a circle; it then turned again, passed by the trees, and formed another circle beyond them. Between the rock and the brook and trees, and brook again, was an undulating surface, covered with green grass and beautiful flowers. Here the winds made music in the trees; here the stream made music as it leaped from the hill and rock; here the flowers smiled and loaded the frolicsome breezes with fragrance.

I seated Helen, and took my place by her side. My arm was round her as of yore, and one of her hands was clasped in mine. We talked long of the good old times, when we were seldom apart, and life seemed like a rosy dream. We spoke of the time that we were separated—of the events which then transpired. I made bold to speak of Irene Dinneford; and, at Helen's request, described her person, manners, accomplishments, mind and heart. I gave her a brief account of our first acquaintance, our succeeding interviews, my rescuing her in the moment of peril, our engagement and its close. Helen listened attentively, and remarked, when I had done,

"She must be a beautiful girl, Henri; and I wonder how you could so readily have given her up!"

"She did not truly love me, Helen," I replied; "and I did not love her with that devotion which is requisite for one constituted as I am."

"I am surprised that you did not love her! And she is to be married soon, you say?"

"Yes, and to one who is worthy of her. They are two noble spirits, and love each other with undying affection."

"Their life will be happy, then. You ought to be thankful that you found out, before too late, what her true feelings were."

"I am thankful, Helen; but, if I had not, I do not think I could have married her."

"Under the circumstances, I cannot see how it could have been prevented. You were solemnly engaged to her, and also engaged in partnership with her father; and the wedding-day was fixed, and close at hand. When I get entangled thus, I am very sure that it will result in marriage."

"I should have found some way of escape, for I knew that my whole heart was elsewhere!"

"You mean that some one else had won it, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"If you had said that some other person had a part of your heart, I could have believed you; but, when a young man voluntarily enters into an engagement with a lady, and on that account, makes business arrangements which are distasteful to him, and not influenced in the least by the expectation of obtaining wealth, I cannot believe that any other being has all his heart."

"But you do not think that I had given it all to Irene!"

"O, no. She had a part, and somebody else a part; and perhaps there was a third or fourth, to share in the coveted treasure!"

"You are joking now."

"Not by any means; for I believe every word I have said."

"Do you not think it possible for a man to love a woman—some cherished one—very dearly, and not realize it? And could he not pledge himself to another, whom he greatly admired; and, after that, for the first time become aware of the fact that the former had his heart, and not the latter?"

"I can imagind such a case, but I cannot appreciate that kind of love.

"And would not be thankful for its manifestation?"

"Certainly not, for I should wish for something better."

"If one who loved you should do as I have, how could he satisfy you of whole-souled, devoted love?"

"That is a dfficult question to answer."

"I should not suppose it very difficult."

"Different persons would view the matter in a different light;—but shall we not return?—the evening grows damp."

"It is not very damp, and it is so warm the falling dew will not prove injurious. Don't let us go yet, for I have not said half that I wish to."

"We can talk on our way home."

"But it is very pleasant sitting here."

"Yes, and it is very pleasant rambling about, when the moon shines so beautifully."

"I would rather sit still and talk, when the subject so comes home to the heart."

"And I would not, on such a night as this."

"You think, then, that one could not gain your love, if he had offered himself to another?"

"Perhaps so, and perhaps not," she said, rising from her seat. "I am for having a dance with the brook. How softly it sings and talks! Maybe it is making love to the flowers."

"I wish it would teach me to make love."

"Perhaps it will, if you ask it to."

"What shall I say to it?"

"Say what you please; I cannot be your teacher."

"Will you interpret its answer?"

"O, no!—why should I?"

"Because you are better acquainted with its language than I am,"

"How did you learn that fact, admitting it to be one?"

"I took the privilege of a Yankee, and guessed. Besides, I knew that from a child you loved all things which were beautiful, and understood their language."

"I am well learned, then. But I am quite anxious to hear you talk to the little sparkling drops that go leaping and dancing over the rocks. Sometimes I think they clap their hands for joy."

"Your imagination is active to-night. But I will try and gratify you. 'Most beautiful water-spirits, ye who coquet all day with the sunbeams, who leap down the hillsides, and move gently through the valleys,—who sing so sweetly your evening songs, making love to the flowers, forming yourselves into a mirror for the moon and stars,—teach me, ye bright angles, how to gain the heart of the one I love—'"

I was here interrupted by a loud laugh from Helen.

"That was capital," she said, "and so poetical! The water-spirits ought to feel flattered. But they will not tell you; for they would be afraid that by the time you had gained it, you would be in love with somebody else."

"You are a cruel girl!"

"O, no Henri; not a bit cruel. But hark! the bell is ringing nine; it is time to go home."

"I would rather stay longer, but will do as you say."

On our way home we talked upon various subjects, but I could not gain courage sufficient to offer her my hand and heart.

CHAPTER XXIII.

TWICE REJECTED.

When we had arrived at the house Helen went to her room, and I to the parlor; where I found uncle, aunt, and a young man whom they introduced as Mr. Gray. A few commonplace remarks were made, and we were relapsing into silence, when Helen came in. She appeared very glad to see Mr. Gray, and took a seat by his side; and they were soon absorbed in a conversation—carried on in an undertone—that nobody could understand but themselves. I sat and looked on with feelings more easily imagined than described. I was really jealous, and wished Mr. Gray anywhere but there. It was bad enough to find Helen's feelings so different from what I had expected; but to meet with a rival so soon, and be obliged to endure his presence, while he appropriated Helen entirely to himself, was too much. I was as unhappy as I could reasonably be.

They conversed for some thirty minutes together, and then we entered into a general conversation. I was anxious to find him a fool, for I thought she could not love a man without good sense. His remarks convinced me that he was not a fool, and neither was he very intelligent. I was certain that he was far beneath Helen, and this gave me a vast deal of satisfaction. At his request, Helen played and sang; and he took the liberty to stand near her, select the music and turn over the leaves, with which she seemed well pleased. When she relenquished her seat, my uncle desired Mr. Gray to occupy it; and he complied with the request, and played very beautifully. "At least," thought I, "there is one thing about him which will be attractive to Helen—his love of music."

I remained until after ten o'clock; and, as Mr. Gray did not manifest any intentions of going, and fearing that my room was preferable to my company, I bade them goodnight, and went to my chamber. It was between eleven and twelve when he took his departure. I was then too jealous and miserable to expect to sleep, if I sought my bed; so I remained up long enough to compose the following lines, which I insert, not because of their poetical merit, but because they serve to show the state of my mind at that time. A very little thing made me jealous, and fearful that Helen had given her heart to another.

I know a glad and beautiful maiden,
Who warbled a bird-like glee;
And when my heart is wearily laden,
She sings her songs to me;
I clasp her hand—her eyes meet mine,
Till my cheeks with tears are wet;
I bask in smiles that seem divine,—
And her I would forget!

By her side I've sat when fleeting hours
Were full of heaven to me,
And thought the blest in Eden's bowers
Not half so happy as we;
I never knew such rapturous bliss
Till thus our souls had met,
I wished no greater joy than this,—
And her I would forget!

I love this glad and beautiful maiden,
Who warbles a bird-like glee,
And fancy I dwell in blissful Aidenn
When she sings her songs to me.
Her angel-face, bewitching crew,
Have all my thoughts beset,
More beautiful than starry skies,—
And her I would forget!

How long I've prayed that she might love me!—
Alas! my prayers are vain;
My lot is dark like skies above me'
That lower with storm and rain;
I've loved her as I've loved no other,—
'Tis useless, sad regret,
She loves me not, but loves another,—
And her I would forget!

After I had finished the above, I retired; but it was nearly morning before I fell asleep, and then I dreamed that Helen was married to Mr. Gray. I fancied that I saw her standing at the alter, looking too beautiful to unite herself to mortal. While a sweet, angelic smile played upon her countenance, she gave her hand to Mr. Gray, and was lost to me foreveer.

My agitation was so great, that I awoke,—and was so happy to find it was a dream The sun was just rising from his ocean bed, as I arose, and dressed myself, and sat down by the open window, to let the fresh air cool my fevered brow. As I sat surveying the beautiful scene which lay before me, I espied Helen returning from a morning walk, in company with Mr. Gray.

Reader, you may think it a little thing; you may think that I was very silly; but the first glance of them caused a pang to shoot through my heart, bitter as death. My suspicions that he was her accepted lover were now confirmed, and the thought was agony. "If it is so," I said, "let me die, for there is no more for me."

I tried to despise her for loving one so much her inferior, and tried to persuade myself that, were he her equal, I could bear to see her love and marry him. When they had arrived within a few rods of the house, they bade each other good-morning, and he walked hastily towards the village. I went down stairs, and met her at the door.

"Good-morning," she said in a sprightly tone.

"Good-morning," I replied; "you walk early."

"I do, occasionally; but no earlier than we used to ramble, before you went to New York."

"I suppose your morning walks are more pleasant than they were then."

"What makes you think so?"

"Present appearances."

"They are not more pleasant, Henri; and I don't expect them to be, for they were very pleasant then."

"I am glad to hear you say so. But who is this Mr. Gray, who seems to be so very attentive?"

"Why, Mr. Gray, to be sure."

"I was aware of that fact. But where is he from?—What is his business?—how long have you been acquainted with him?"

"He is my music teacher, a distant relative of Mrs. Stewart's; and came to the country from Boston, early in the spring, for his health."

"And does he not hold any other relation to you than that of a teacher of music?"

"I trust he does."

"I thought as much."

"He is my friend, Henri, and I hope he may be yours."

"Your lover, you mean."

"No, not a lover.

"Do you speak truly?"

"He has never formally proposed."

"But will soon?"

"I do not know."

"What do you think?'

"I think he has no such thought or intention."

"What should you say, if he did?"

"I don't know."

"Don't know, Helen?"

"How should I, when I do not anticipate any such result? But what foolish questions you are asking me this morning? I shall not answer any more."

"I think I shall go home today."

"So soon? You cannot be in earnest. Why, you have but just arrived. You must not go today. Come, look more cheerful, and say you will stay a good long time."

"I cannot promise you, Helen; but if you wish it, I will not go today."

"Nor to-morrow neither?"

"Nor to-morrow."

"Now you talk like yourself. I shall not let you go at present, I warrant you."

"Why not?"

"I cannot spare you."

"I should suppose you might."

"And there you are mistaken. Why you have been absent more than a year."

"O, Helen, I could stay forever, if you bade me!"

"Then I shall use my authority not to keep you forever; for you have other friends, and it would be unjust,—but long enough, at least, to learn what effect New York society has had upon you."

"Don't mention New York, for I hate the sound."

"Well, I will not, if you so desire. But I fear you have grown irritable in your absence."

"I fear I shall."

"But I shall not allow it."

"You can prevent it."

"Can I. Then I shall do so. But I must not stand and talk with you longer now, or you will miss those warm biscuits at breakfast you once liked so much."

So saying, she darted in to her work, while I went to a walk, to indulge in not very pleasant reflections.

I thought how different Helen appeared now to what she did when I left her a year ago. She must have changed more than I. I blamed myself for ever having thought of marrying another, and wondered how I could have been so mad. It was only for a moment that I thought of returning home; and I had not parted many minutes from Helen, before I was sorry I had said anything about it. But it was some comfort to have her urge me to stay. It gave me a little bit of hope.

Mr. Gray came in the afternoon, and gave her a lesson in music. At her request, I was present. A few days after, he came, stopped to tea, and spent the evening. Helen occupied so much of the time with him in conversation, that, when I left them at ten, I was so unhappy, and so jealous, that I could not control my feelings, and walked my chamber, pouring execrations upon the unoffending Gray. They had appeared happy; but what a wretched evening had it been to me! I again thought of returning home. Mr. Gray remained but a few moments after I had retired.

In the morning I was little disposed to take my leave. I could not bear the thought of being away from Helen, lest somebody else should win her. It was happiness to be near her, though she gave me little reason to hope that I might ultimately gain her heart. Every day I had the same feelings, until three weeks had passed away, and I was apparently no nearer the attainment of my wishes than when I first came. She appeared friendly, and manifested a sisterly regard for me,—nothing more. Sometimes I could with difficulty control my feelings. I wanted to clasp her in my arms, and call her my own.

We frequently spent part of the evening alone, and, more than once, I had made up my mind to ask her to give me her heart and hand; but, before I could bring sufficient courage to my aid, we were interrupted by the entrance of uncle and aunt, or that hated Gray.

Many of my readers have been placed in similar circumstances, and so they can appreciate my feelings. The one you loved best was near you, and you had summoned sufficient courage to take one of her hands; and, although it struggled a little for freedom, you held on to it. In this situation you had talked of various things, approaching gradually that subject which interested you most of all; but, whenever you had come almost to it, when the way was fairly opened for a declaration of love, the whole thing looks so presumptuous and doubtful, that you would sit in silence for a time, and then you would go back and begin again. By such evolutions your courage was at last screwed up to the sticking point, when the door opened, and in walked the father or mother, or some other equally unwelcome visitor. This was exactly my case, for more than once; but my time came finally.

On the evening of the fifth of July we were alone, and there was no one to interrupt us. We convereed upon various subjects, but principally of romance and poetry. She had lately read a volume of Motherwell, and was in raptures with it. She handed it to me, and requested me to read aloud. I did so, choosing those pieces which would best convey the passionate emotions of my own heart, such as, "O, Agony! Keen Agony!" "The Night's Song," &c.

My whole heart was in the sentiment of the author, and I read with feeling and pathos such lines as the following:

"O, agony! fierce agony!
For loving heart to brook,
In one brief hour, the withering power
Of unimpassioned look!

"O, agony! deep agony!
For heart that's proud and high,
To learn of fate how desolate
It may ere it die!"

"Endearing! Endearing!
Why so endearing
Are those dark, lustrous eyes,
Through their silk fringes peering?
They love me! They love me!
Deeply,—sincerely
And more than ought else on earth,
I love them dearly

"Endearing! endearing!
Why so endearing
Grows the glad sunny smile,
On thy soft cheek appearing?
It brightens! it brightens!
As I am nearing;
And 'tis that fond smile
Is ever endearing."

As I read on, throwing more of heart and soul into each poem, Helen became wholly swallowed up into the thoughts and feelings expressed. Her eyes glowed with that enrapturing spiritual beauty which partakes more of heaven than earth; her cheeks were flushed, and her bosom heaved with deep emotion. I paused, and looked at her; spell-bound. We sat some moments motionless as statues, gazing into each other's eyes, which seemed gushing with burning words, while our tongues were paralyzed with hope and fear. Presently she turned her head, and burst into tears. I felt that now was the time to learn my fate; and I caught hold of her hands, and exclaimed, "O, Helen, this is too much! Suspense is agony, and I cannot bear it! I love you, Helen,—I love only you; and now you cannot, will not, refuse to make me happy!"

With a sad expression upon her face, and withdrawing her hands from mine, she said:

"Henri, I wish—I am sorry for this! If anything that I have done has caused you to make this declaration, I ask your pardon; I did not intend it, nor wish it."

"Why are you sorry? It is not right for you to regret it; and, if you consult your own heart, it will tell you so. I cannot doubt but that its emotions respond to mine."

"Nay, Henri, you flatter yourself too much!"

"Your words are cruel as the grave; they cannot be true, for I believe that you love me."

"I hope you will rest satisfied, then."

"But I would rather hear it from your own lips."

"You would not have me utter that which is false?"

"No; but you cannot mean that it would be falce. O, Helen! do not keep me in suspence, but tell me at once that you will gratify the dearest and most sacred wishes of my heart!"

I paused for a reply, but she uttered not a word; her head was resting upon her hand, as if in deep thought.

"How shall I interpret this silence, Helen? Give me but one word, one look, your sign that I am beloved, and I will be satisfied!"

She remained silent, and I was about to clasp her to my heart, when she said,

"Henri, this scene is very painful to me, and I wish, for the happiness of both, that it had not occured. Whenever I say to any being 'I love you,' those will be most sacred, most holy, and they will never be recalled; but should I say them to you now, I might have cause to take them back."

"Never, Helen, for you would have my whole heart in exchange for yours! You do love me, dearest?"

"I have not told you so and it is possible for you to be mistsken."

"No, no, I cannot be! I am convinced by that sweet, entrancing glance that was fixed upon me but just now, that your heart must be mine, for I read its thoughts and emotions in your eyes. Than do not continue my unhappiness, by refusing to confess a truth which will fill my breast with rapture!"

"If my heart has made this confession, you need not to learn it again; spoken language is less expressive than the language of the heart and eye."

"But tell me if I have read this language aright?"

"After what I have already said to you, Henri, you must be your own judge."

"Helen, can I be satisfied with this?"

"You must."

"I cannot, will not, be satisfied! But perhaps there is a prior engagement? You love Mr. Gray!"

"You have no right to say that!"

I was now growing jealous, and my thoughts were very bitter.

"You love him, I know you do!" I exclaimed, in an excited tone. "You love one who is not your equal; and you will marry him, and end our friendship forever!"

"This from you, Henri?"

"Reject a heart, if you will, that beats only for you; and then be happy, if you can! Marry Gray, if you are so disposed, and then see how you will feel when you learn, as you must, that he is far beneath you! Do not think to retain my love, friendship or respect, then; for you shall not have them!"

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the Republican.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 6, 1873.

ABOUT GENERAL GRANT.

I do not write in the interest of a third term for President Grant. On the contrary I am earnestly opposed to giving a third term to any man, however well he may have served us for the first and second terms. Yet, I fancy the farmers have not given General Grant credit for what he has already done to befriend them. He has, in fact, been one of the promoters of the movement that is now causing such a commotion among the monopolists. We cannot have forgotten that he recommended Congressional action on a number of schemes having in view the obtaining of cheaper routes of transportation to the sea-board from the West. We can scarcely have forgotten what was written on the subject of cheap transportation in his last annual message. In that address he referred to "various enterprises for more certain and cheaper transportation of the constantly increasing surplus of Western and Southern products to the Atlantic sea-board." He mentioned in particular the "route to connect the Mississippi valley with the Atlantic at Charleston, South Carolina, and Savannah, Georgia, by water, by way of the Ohio and Tennessee rivers, and canals and slack-water navigation to the Savannah and Ocmulgee rivers." Also an "extension of the Kanawha and James River Canal to the Ohio," and "a project to facilitate commerce by the building of a ship-canal around Niagara Falls on the United States side."

The President did not, however, recommend that any action be taken in the matter of either project without first making a rigid inquiry into the feasibility of each. He said enough to indicate that he was intensely interested in the question of cheap transportation, and that he would favor any project that proved to be practicable after a thorough investigation of the subject. He says in the message referred to: "Looking at the great future of the country and the increasing demands of commerce it might be well, while on this subject, not only to have examined and reported upon the various practicable routes for connecting the Missi-sippi with tide-water on the Atlantic, but the feasibility of an almost continuous land-locked navigation from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico. Such a route along our coast would be of great value at all times and of inestimable value in case of foreign war. Nature has provided the greater part of this route and the obstacles to overcome are easily within the reach of an engineer.

This reference to the question of cheap transportation in the President's message had its effect in the appointment of a special committee of the Senate, with Senator Windon for chairman. This committee has been pushing its inquiries during the entire summer, and the report to be submitted at the next session is looked forward to with the greatest eagerness. It is anticipated that this report will shed more light upon the important subjects to be treated of than any paper that has ever been published. Now, this is one of the results, only one of the several however, of the few words addressed by President Grant to Congress and to the people. Another of the great direct results of his recommendations, was the Congressional convention held at St. Louis a few months since, and the convention of Governors held at Atlanta about the same time. Indeed we are not able to estimate the effect that his words have had. Their influence has been felt even in the farmers' meetings, and a new impetus has been given to the movement. The fact that the question was considered so important as to warrant so extended a notice in the Presidential message called to it the attention of men who would have otherwise passed it by, and in the eyes of some men it thereby gained a respectability that it would not otherwise have had.

Now, it may be that none of the schemes referred to by President Grant will be satisfactory to the farmers, (they would not be to me,) yet enough is shown to prove that he is in hearty sympathy with the movement. Let a better plan be submitted and there can be no doubt that it will receive his approval. The farmers must not forget that they are the debtors of the President in this matter to a large extent.

A DEMAND BY THE COLORD PEOPLE.

The colored people of Charleston, South Carolina, are making a move on the political chess-board the significance of which is apparent and calls for no comment from my pen. A hand-bill has been printed and distributed setting forth the demands which they make, and as they have the numerical strength to make their demands heard we may expect to hear something further on the subject. They demand a distribution of the offices as follows: for mayor, a white man; for aldermen, nine colored and nine white men; for chief of police a colored man; for first lieutenant of police, a white man; for second lieutenant, a colored man; for noncommissioned officers and privates of police, alternately white and colored men. It seems to be the plan to have the colored people choose the white candidates and the whites choose the colored candidates. The colored people will therefor not select any man as candidate except such as come squarely out in favor of the platform they have laid down. They say: "We also demand an equal alternate prorata in all the other departments of the city government and a share in the executive patronage; and no man, we care not whom, shall receive our notice as a candidate who does not endorse and advocate these measures." That the colored people have the numbers to make this thing tell is certain, and if they have sufficient organization among themselves they will be able to force the whites to accede to their terms.

This movement following on the heels of those in Ohio, in Maryland and in this city, of which I wrote you last week, but proves the correctness of the position I then took, that there was some cause to which this disaffection could be traced were we to take take the trouble to investigate it. The machinations of political demagogues may have had something to do with it. It is not at all probable that this "Black Man's Blunder," as it is termed, will become general, but the movement has already become sufficiently extended to engage our serious attention.

RECALL OF THE JAPENESE STUDENTS.

Much comment is likely to be excited by the action of the Japanese government in calling home the young men sent to this country and to Europe to be educated. A number of them have been students in the Howard University in this city. O hers have been placed in other institutions of learning, and others have been pursuing special duties under private instructors. The government has given no intimation of its reasons for calling them home, but it is very evident that this action has considerable significance. There are about six hundred of these young men abroad, and the only object there could have been in educating them in this country and Europe was to enable them to gain thorough ideas of our civilization. In philosophy and in science the Japanese are not at all behind us.

It is only in the practical application of scientific methods to things of every-day life that we excel them. It would have been much less expensive to import the teachers than to send the students abroad, but it was thought best to adopt the latter course, for the reason that these young men, destined to play important parts in the future of Japan, should have ample opportunities for observing the effects of other civilization than their own.

Much has been said about the spirit of progress that has been lately manifested in Japan, and it does seem that there has been a serious inclination to adopt some of the features of our civilization. A large number of Americans have been appointed to import official positions at immense salaries; traveling embassies have been sent out to visit the United States and the various European nations; American machinery has been introduced, and a proposition to substitute the English language for their native tongeue has been seriously entertained.

Now, the question is, does the calling home to their students abroad indicate an intention to abandon this policy? If so we may expect to hear next that the Americans in Japan have been dismissed from their renumerative official positions and superceded by natives.

The reason for this apparent reversal of the policy of the last few years may be that the Japanese have begun to find out that which many of us have known from the begining; that is, that the Americans they have appointed to office are men of little or no ability; instance the case of General Horace Capron also that of E. Peshine Smith, Esq., and that the schools to which they have sent their young men to be educated are not generally model institutions; instance the Howard University, which is not certainly a first class educational establishment; at any rate an acquaintance with some of the professors of that institution does not serve to so impress a close observer. But we may expect further developments of this Japanese puzzle.

THE President of the Wilksbarre Convention stated, while the ballot for Supreme Judge was pending, that Judge LUDLOW could always be depended on for his "Democrat." True, Judge LUDLOW never forgets, whether on or off the bench, that he is a Democrat, and he always gives his party the benefit of any judicial doubt that may arise. He believes the Registry law of the State unconstitutional, and will so decide, if elected; and any Republican who votes for him in Philadelphia or out of it, must do so with the full knowledge that he will go as far on the bench, to serve his party, as any Democrat in the State would do.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
JURUBEBA
BLOOD PURIFIER

Is the most powerful cleanser, strengthener and remover of Glandular Obstructions known to Materia Medica.

It is specially adapted to constitutions "worn down" and debilitated by the warm weather of Spring and Summer, when the blood is not in active circulation, consequently gathering impurities from sluggishness and imperfect action of the secretive organs, and is manifested by Tumors, Eruptions, Blotches, Boils, Pustules, Scrofula, &c., &c.

When weary and languid from overwork, and dullness, drowsiness and inertia take place of energy and vigor the system needs a Tonic to build it up and help the Vital Forces to regain their recuperative power.

In the heat of Summer, frequently the Liver and Spleen do not properly perform their functions; the Uterine and Urinary Organs are inactive, producing weakness of the stomach and intestines and a predisposition to biffious derangement.

DR. WELLS'
EXTRACT OF JERUBEBA

is prepared directly from the SOUTH AMERICAN PLANT, and is peculiarly suited to all these difficulties; it will cleanse the VITIATED BLOOD, strengthening the LIFE-GIVING POWERS, and REMOVE ALL OBSTRUCTIONS from IMPAIRED AND ENFEEBLED ORGANS.

It should be freely taken, as Jerubeba is pronounced by medical writers the most efficient PURIFIER, TONIC and DEOBSTRUENT known in the whole range of medicinal plants.

THE PLATFORM.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania, in convention assembled, renew their expressions of confidence in and devotion to the principles of Republicanism, and declare

First. That we heartily endorse and re-adopt the Republican National and State platforms of 1872.

Second. That the National Administration commands our continued confidence and is entitled, by its promotion of the best interests and prosperity of the Nation, to the earnest support of the people.

Third. That the administration of Gov. Hartranft calls for our warmest approbation. During the short time he has been in the Executive Department he has established a State policy which has justly endeared him to the people of this Commonwealth, and has amply justified the confidence we placed in him.

Fourth. That while earnestly in favor of Constitutional Reform, and of such a revision of our State Constitution as will make it an effective instrument in preventing and punishing the corrupt abuses that have crept in under our present system, we demand emphatically and especially, that whatever is done or left undone, the main purpose for which the Constitutional Convention was called, the absolute prevention of special legislation, shall be placed before the people as to secure their separate and custive expression thereon.

Fifth. That the reduction of the State debt from $41,000,000 to $26,000,000, the repeal of all State taxes on real estate, the establishment of schools for the support of soldier's orphans, the maintenance of our excellant and prosperous system of common schools, the establishment of the policy of paying off our debt at the rate of two millions a year, and the generally flourishing condition of our prosperous old Commonwealth, are evidences that the Republicans, during their twelve years control in Pennsylvania, have faithfully administered her affairs and that the reins of government may safely be left in their hands,

Sixth. That there should be rigid economy in the State and National Administrations, and the taxes should be reduced in both as rapidly as consistant with good government, the maintenance of the public credit and certain extinguishment of State and National debts.

Seventh. That the public lands belong to the people, and should be sacredly reserved for homes for actual settlers, and we pronounce against all further grants of these lands to corporations.

Eigth. That adequate provision should be made by law for the protection of persons engaged in mining and other hazardous forms of labor.

Ninth. That as retrenchment is required to lighten the burden of taxation and to continue reduction of the public debt, an increase of salaries is unwise, and we condemn without reserve voting for or receiving increased pay for services already rendered, whether in State or nation, and demand that the provisions of the late act of Congress, by which the salaries were increased, should be promptly and unconditionally repealed.

Tenth. That we heartily denounce corruption wherever found, and are sincerely desirous for honesty, economy and political purity in all official administrations. To secure this is the duty of every citizen; and to this end every good man should feel bound not only to participate in politics, but to labor actively to see that none but good men secure party appointments or nominations.

Eleventh. That the practice of loading the appropriation bill, essential to the support of the government, with objectionable legislation in the shape of amendments toward the close of the session is a prolific source of abuse and a fraud upon the people, and its reform is urgently demanded.

Twelfth. That as the country and home industry have uniformly prospered under a tariff so arranged as to afford both revenue and protection, the present tariff should be left undisturbed; and as all tariffs are levied primarily for revenue, it would be a poor government, indeed, which could not afford to arrange its details so as to encourage the growth of home manufactures, and the creation of a remunerative home market for all the products of our soil.

Thirteenth. That order and security in the States lately in rebellion must come through the stern enforcement of the laws enacted to protect life, liberty, and freedom of thought, and cannot be secured by rendering these just and necessary laws inoperative through executive clemency to unrepentant assassins, now undergoing punishment in pursuance of law.

Fourteenth. That as, during the time the Republican party has been in power, it has had to confront graver difficulties and more new and perplexing questions of government, than ever were presented to any other party to solve, and has solved them so judiciously and wisely that the country indorses its decisions and accepts its work, it is the only organization competent to meet the grave issues that are now constantly arising, so as to secure the just rights of the whole people.

Fifteenth. That we sympathize with every movement to secure for agriculture and labor their due influence, interests and rights, and the Republican party will be their ally in every just effort to attain that end.

SENATORIAL.

The present epoch in the political history of this state is distinctly characterized by a strong popular sentiment against the further toleration of the corrupt practises in legislature, which have injured the fair fame of our glorious old commonwealth, and which if suffered to continue, will make her a "hissing and a by word." One of the many strong proofs of the prevalance of such a sentiment, is the stern determination manifested by the members of the constitutional convention, to hedge about legislation with iron clad oaths and other safeguards, so as if possible to prevent a repetition of the shameful corruptions of past years. Notwithstanding the efforts made to prejudice the public mind against these measures of reform, there are unerring indications of not only a willingness, but an anxiety on the part of the people for their adoption, and their being made part of the fundamental law of the state. It needs no power of divination to tell from what source such opposition is likely to arise. But guard legislation as you may, "where there is a will there is a way" to accomplish the designs of corrupt men. Impressed therefore, with the necessity of electing honest representatives as the surest guarantee against the unfaithful exercise of delegated power, the people have resolved to place in power, only men of well tried character for integrity. This important change in public sentiment acquires greater significance from the fact that it is not confined to any political party but pervades the entire community. The people are evidently willing to ignore party differences so far at least as to accomplish a purpose of such para mount importance. It is gratifying to be assured that the nomination of John Irwin, Jr., as candidate for Senator in the 22d senatorial district will afford to the voters of this district a full opportunity to assert their determination to uphold the measures of reform to which reference has already been made. But for his disposition to be modest and retiring, and his aversion to being made conspicuous, it would be a work of supererogation to tell the people of the district who or what he is, and what are the qualities of heart and mind, which render him eminently qualified to represent this constituency in the Senate of Pennsylvania. Amongst the citzens of his own county and the business men throughout the district there is no need to tell of his virtues, for to them he is well and favorably known; but there are no doubt many men who are engaged in the quiet pursuits of life, with whom he has never been brought in contact either socially or in business relations, to whom he is comparatively, and it may be entirely unknown. To such it is due, that through the medium of the public prints, his friends, by whom he has been placed in nomination, should make known, the reason why he has been selected as a candidate for an office so important, and at a time like the present, when good men are being sought after to fill places of public trust.

John Irwin, Jr., is a native of Bellefonte, and having spent almost the whole of his life in Centre County, the people of this county have had ample opportunity to know him entirely. His success in business, and the high position he occupies in public esteem, are owing to his own exertions, his untiring industry, his clear judgment and foresight, and his upright and consistent conduct. Laying the foundations of all his enterprizes in principles of honesty, good faith and fair dealing, his life has been a continuation of uninterrupted success in business, and has resulted in winning for him that which is better than riches, a good name. From early boyhoodh e has been in the employ of or associated in business with men of large business experience, gentlemen of high toned morality, and capable of appreciating real worth.

In every instance he won and held the entire confidence and the highest esteem of those with whom he held such relations. Having been exclusively engaged in agriculture and the manufacture of iron ever since his early youth, he has gathered a fund of experience and information on these and kindred subjects which enables him fully to understand the wants and true interests of a people largely engaged in such pursuits. He knows the right and knowing he will dare maintain it, for although modesty is a prominent trait in his character he has never been known to swerve from the line of duty out of fear of offending. To this characteristic, all who know him must if they will speak the truth bear uniform testimony. It is mainly owing to this principle of stern integrity which has manifested itself in all his intercourse with the people, that he enjoys the entire and unbounded confidence of his fellow citizens of all parties and of every circle in society.

Mr Irwin has never been a politician, in the sense in which that term is commonly used—has never held and has never sought for public office.

Like every other man of mind he has opinions and decided opinions, concerning the questions of state and national policy upon which political parties are divided. At the same time his independence of mind and character is well known to all who enjoy his acquaintance, as well as his ability to give a sound reason for the faith that is in him. But the quality which peculiarly fits him, being a man of high intelligent and of large and varied information, for the office in which he is sought to be placed, is his thorough appreciation of the duties belonging to persons occupying positions of public or private trust. Of private trusts he has held many, some of them of the most important and delicate nature, and his friends can well afford to challenge inquiry into the faithful, the conscientious and satisfactory discharge of every trust committed to his care. "He that is faithful in little will be faithful also in much."

We have said that he has never been a politician, in the sense indicated. He has however, from conviction, been a consistent Republican, and has at all times endeavored to maintain and promote the principles belonging to that party. Being however independent and conservative in his views, and having stood entirely aloof from participation in the local differences and disagreements which have at times sprung up and threatened to divide and distract the party, he is on this account sure to draw to his support the entire strength of the Republican party and to have the support of thoughtful men of the opposite party who earnestly desire to promote the public welfare and so far as their suffrage can accomplish it to secure wise and honest legislation. The voters of the district may be fully assured that he will be guided and governed solely by a sence of official obligation and that they may safely entrust to him the interests of the district and of the State.

He is posessed of intellect, experience, integrity, courage and every other qualification requisite to fit any man to be a representative of an intelligent and moral constituency, and we earnestly hope and confidently expect that the people of the district, true to the record they have made in the past of a determination to elevate none but fit men to offices of public trust, will rally to his support, and show by their votes a just appreciation of real worth.

ON THE WING NO. 6.

Going from Nittany into Bald Eagle Valley, we leave the lime-stone soil, and iron mines, for the heavy clay bottoms, and sandy, gravely hill sides which distinguish the latter valley. Instead of the lime-stone, we find slate which is so prominent in the Bituminous regions. No person can ride through this valley without being struck with the peculiarity of the Bald Eagle range, broken into compound ranges, and comical shaped hills. Through the opening in this remarkable range, we everywhere view the main range of the Allegheny like a mighty wall, the real spinal column of the whole Appalachian system.

Through this valley runs the Bald Eagle creek, a stream large enough to be dignified with the name of "river." One views many handsome situations while passing through this valley. While walking around Howard, our attention is drawn to a beautiful home on the left bank of the Creek. The fields have a gentle slope from the bank of the stream about eighty rods to where the building stands. These buildings are sufficiently elevated to command a clear view of the surrounding scenery which is rarely surpassed. The grounds are so well tilled, the taste so manifest in the location of the buildings, with a never failing spring bubbling up just at the door, a glimpse at the stock, are sure to excite an interest, and lead one to ask who lives up there? Upon inquiry we find it is the residence of J. A. Woodward Esq. But as he is a young man, we know there must be a history connected with this place, that leads us back to the early days of the republic. James Packer, Senior was born at Princeton, N. J., in 1725, and when a young man lived in Chester county, Pa.

He was said to be the best man in the town; that is he was the strongest man, and able to whip any man in the region. This was a qualification greatly prized at that time. Mr. Packer was a Quaker. He was one day met by a stranger riding past him on horseback. He was a stout, rugged man. Looking Mr. Packer in the eyes, he inquires, "Are you James Packer?" Yes, that is my name. "I understand said the stranger," you call yourself the best man in the town, and I intend one of these days to give you a threshing. "Well" said the sturdy Quaker, "if thee is going to do it, thee may as well do it now as any time." At the same moment taking off his coat, rolling up his sleeves, squared off for the contest. The battle did not last long, but the stranger received a severe whipping and went on his way a wiser, and perhaps a better man. This James Packer was the man who purchased this farm in 1790.

We had the pleasure of looking at the old Patent granted to Joseph Wilson in 1769, during the Adminnistration of Gov. Mifflin whose name is attached to the instrument. By him it was conveyed to Samuel Walis in 1779, and by the latter to James Packer in 1790. The farm has remained in the Packer family since James Packer, Jr., came into possession of this farm by inheritance, built the present mansion, married, and moved into his new home in 1803. Here in this quiet retreat, nestled among the mountains, Governor Packer was born. His father and grandfathers were buried in a family graveyard on the farm, and their graves are marked by rude slabs of slate cut and inscribed by the hands of the boy and brother, when he, who afterwards became Governor, was but ten years old. We could but feel, while looking at them, that there rude slabs of slate were more precious mementoes than the most lofty marble pillars. These plain slabs still bear the evidence of being the work of mere children. Perhaps these boys were never so happy, as when chiseling the rude characters to perpetuate the memory of these loved ones, who were quietly sleeping beneath their little feet. The character that really stands prominent in connection with the history of this farm, is that of Gov. W. F. Packer. He was born in 1807. His father died when William was but seven years old. He was one of five children who were thus left to the care of the widow.

But the boys as they grew up, gave their mother the benefit of their industry and perseverance, and thus in early life, adopted that principle of self-reliance which so distinguished the future Governor of Pennsylvania. By his own energy he rose very rapidly in public esteem. He became editor, Canal-commissioner, Auditor-General. In 1847 he was elected a member of the House of Representives, and though the first time he was a member of any legislative body, he was elected speaker. This is said to be a compliment never accorded to another man in the history of this state. He was elected the following term, and though the parties were equally divided in the House of Representative, he was again elected Speaker. In 1849, Mr. Packer was elected a member of the State Senate in opposition to Andrew G. Curtin, who succeeded Gov. Packer as the Executive of the State. In 1857, Mr. Packer was elected Governor of Pennsylvania. The Kansas difficulty was shaking the Republic violently from the Lakes to the Gulf. Gov. Packer was a Democrat of the Douglas school on "popular sovereignty," and a Jackson Democrat on the doctrine of State-rights and Secession. He approved of the Kansas Bill, and advocated the hanging of traitors. "The Goverment of the United States, within the limits assigned to it, is as potential as any other government in the civilized world." "Secession is only another orm of nullification, either when attempted by force is rebellion, and should be treated as such." Such are his words which are not easily misunderstood. This old farm is remarkable for having given birth to one who made himself so prominent, and performed the duties assigned him so well. In Europe men have titles by inheritance, in the United States, men obtain titles by hard work, and our great minds come from the homes of the working men. Our Shoemakers, farmers, tanners, rail-splitters are the men that rise and shine as stars of the first magnitude in the political sky. We love our institution because the way to political distinction lies open to all, the rich and poor alike. If a man acquires a distinction, he must work for it. There is no government in the world, where the rewards are so sure as in our own. The men of brains are those who hold the reins of power. Governor Packer, in stature, was six feet high, and weighed two hundred and twenty five pounds. He died at sixty three.

John A. Woodward, Esq., married a daughter of Gov. Packer and now lives on the farm with his accomplished wife. It is a beautiful home, and its location is such that it may be made the most attractive in the valley. Mr. Woodward thinks that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well. He carries this principle into all the departments of farming. The farm is rapidly assuming the appearance of careful cultivation. It is intended to make it a stock-farm. He has cut this year, over ninety tons of hay, and the other crops are rapidly increasing in value under vigorous treatment. His stock is of the finest character, as he takes the greatest pains in rearing it. Directly North of the house stands an oak, mentioned as a line tree in collonial times, and is yet green and vigorous, though more than a hundred years have elapsed since the date was inscribed upon it, and the trees that grew up by its side have fallen and gone to their original elements—no trace is left of their existence. Like an old man who has out-lived his generation, and is alone in this busy world, so this old tree stands, a monument of the past. Upon a recent visit to this old home, we met the Governor's widow, and also his sister, who is the wife of Rev. Mr. Mitchell, Howard. The latter gentleman has been in Howard for nearly 40 years, and calls up many remeniscences of the family history. While enjoying the pleasure of this social circle, we could but wish the happy family a long and prosperous life. ALPHA.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

SAVE YOUR DOCTOR'S BILL.—when Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry will cure coughs, colds, bleeding at the lungs, and arrest the fell destroyer, Consumption, it does more than most physicians can do. The use of a single bottle costing one dollar, will satisfy the incredulous that they need look no further for the required aid.

OUR MOTHERS,

who were the best and tidiest housewives in the world—excepting our grandmothers!—took especial pride in the possession of rows of tinware that glistened like a polished mirror. Every article about their house susceptible of polish, including the brass knocker, was regularly brightened up until it fairly glistened. With their primitive materials, such as Bath brick, emery, rotten stone, etc., it was a serious labor, albeit one of love. Now-a-days, however, their daughters use Sapollo, and in one hour can polish more articles and do it better than they could in a whole day. If you wish to excel your mothers in the brightness of your kitchen ware, use Sapollo.

CORN STARCH CAKE.—To the yolks of four eggs, beaten, add two cups white sugar, one cup butter, one cup sweet milk, one cup corn starch, two and-a-half cups flour, having in it one measure Banner Baking Powder; add last the whites of four eggs, well beaten.

Each can of the Banner Baking Powder contains a small measure to be used even full, according to printed directions. If you cannot obtain this really valuable article from your grocer, send twenty-five cents by mail, addressed to Banner Baking Powder, P. O. Lock Box., 317, Pittsburgh, Pa., and you will receive, postage paid, a quarter pound package, together with a list of fifty valuable Recipes.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Your attention is specially invited to the fact that the National Banks are now prepared to receive subscription to the Capital Stock of the Centenaial Board of Finance. The funds realized from this source are to be employed in the erection of the buildings for the International Exhibition, and the expenses connected with the same. It is confidently believed that the Keystone State will be represented by the name of every citizen alive to patriotic commemoration of the one hundred birth-day of the nation. The shares of stock are offered for $10 each, and subscribers will recieve a handsomely steel engraved Certificate of Stock, suitable for framing and preservation as a national memorial.

Interest at the rate of six per cent per annm will be paid on all payments of Centenial Stock from date of payment to January 1, 1876.

Subscribers who are not near a National Bank can remit a check or post-office order to the undersigned.

Centaur Liniment.

There is no pain which the Centaur Liniment will not relieve, no swelling it will not subdue and no lameness which it will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. Where the parts are not gone, its effects are marvelous. It has produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swellings caked-breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, earache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains spavin, galls, &c., upon animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. It is a counter-irritant, an all-healing pain reliever. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, poisonous bites are endered harmless, and the wounded are healed without a scar. It is no humbug. The recipe is published around each bottle. It is selling as no article ever before sold, and it sells because it does just what it pretends to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling, deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe, &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules, or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—this liniment is worth your attention. No family should be without Centaur Liniment. Price, 50c. a bottle, large bottles $1. 00. J. B. ROSE & Co.,
53 Broadway, New York.

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals, morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Temperance Politics.

BY CONVICTION.

What is politics? Supppose we stop for a moment in our mad political career, and ask ourselves this seemingly plain question. But why falter in our answers to our own conscience? Simply from the fact that we are in bondage. In bondage to whom? Why cannot your judgement divine this to your mind? In bondage I say, and this you deny, and why do you deny it? I answer simply from the fact that you are in the bonds of Satan's chains, of "Political Corruption," and hence cannot see. I am talking to the Christian and temperate portion of our community, and upon whom rests the responsibility of all the evils flowing from the abominations of the intoxicating cup. This is a very serious charge to make, but it is true. I defy you to deny the charge. No man would bring rum or any other alcoholic liquor into the country for the drunkard alone. It is the temperate that supply the intemperate. No man would engage in a trade that none but drunkard's would support. No man could maintain a business for which they were the only customers. It would end in the ruin of his character and business. And again I say, on you, "the temperate and christian" portion of our community, rests the awful responsibility for every drunkard that is made in our land. For you it remains to decide whether this land shall continue to suffer all the wretchedness and woe now upon us through the liquor traffic, or whether it shall be relieved from the horrors of and the guilt of intemperance. For you it remains to say whether intemperance shall end with the present generation of drunkards, or whether it shall survive to sweep away their children and their children's children to the end of time. And will you not decide this question? Will you not save yourselves and your offspring from an endless hell of misery? Let this age be distinguished as the age of a reformation from the abomination of all traffic and use of liquor, and we shall have acquired for our children a triumph as important and great as was the triumph of our fathers in their struggle for independence.

But now to the question. What is politics? You direct me to Webster's definition of the word, very well, all right. I see plainly that political prejudice has so confounded your better judgement, that you cannot answer Politics, says Webster, 1st. the science of government, that part of ethics which consists in the regulation and government of a nation or state, for the preservation of its safety, peace, and prosperity. 2d. In a looser sense, political affairs, or the contests of parties for power. I cannot now say all I desire on this portion of our subject, but hope to do so at some future time. Your eye has caught the caption at the head of this article. "Temperance Politics." How singular this strikes your ear, and what a strange sensation it has produced on your nervous faculties. But if judgement begin at the house of God, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear? Conscience is a little troublesome sometimes, but suppose we modify the above caption a little, and we have it read, "Political Temperance." Perhaps this may better be comprehended. But this caption is not so easily defined at sight. "Political Temperance" is but the seed planted of a party, the germination of which has commenced, and a large sprout has already come forth, upon this are many leaves, but they are not all of a size, there is one much larger than the others, and of a singular shape with four pointers, and looking to the East, West, North and South. Upon each pointer is an inscription reading the same on each, "Third Party," and in a robe like appearance upon the stern another inscription. A light has beamed upon the world, and the Sun of Temperance is now shining with full effulgence. In its rays the horrors of intemperance are clearly and distinctly seen and a remedy for them is revealed. Awfully dark must be the moral vision of that man, whose eyes cannot see this light, and awfully perverse that heart that does not rejoice in it. But now great commotion has taken place in the camps of the two great political parties of the day. They acknowledge temperance as a good thing, but do not drag it into politics is the cry with them. But gentlemen you have forced us to the formation of a Political Temperance organization out of which is growing a third party, known as the temperauce party. A national temperance party, not merely an empty name to use as a political back for rotton politicians to secure office under, but for true reformation in every sense of the word. To bring forward evidence here of the corruption that now exists and has existed for years in the political parties, is not necessary, for this is beyond all power of contradiction. The two present parties of the day are nothing more or less than a mass of corruption, and hence the cry from among you, keep temperance out of politics.

You know full well as soon as the temperance party concentrate their strength upon true temperance men and measures, that the Democratic and Republican parties as they now stand must sink beneath the condemnation of an outraged people. Now friends of temperance and to you in a special manner who cast your votes for "Local Option," I now appeal to you in the name of God and weeping humanity to ponder well upon how you cast your votes at the coming election in October next. But your plea may be that we have not a regular organized temperance ticket. I admit we have not. But we have among the candidates named a few who are and always was pure and sound on the temperance question. I know them, and so do you, and if you do not know them, it becomes your duty to investigate this matter at once, and stand firm upon the great platform of temperance. It is our right and not only our right, but it is our duty to vote for men that we know to be sound on the temperance question. The hugh and cry will be from the Democratic and Republican leaders in our county. Stick to the ticket. This remember is the old whim. Because you are a democrat you are claimed to vote the ticket as prepared by the convention whether it meets your approval on the temperance question or not. And upon the same grounds if you are a Republican you are claimed by your leaders to vote the ticket, whatever may be your convictions upon the temperance question. This plan of operation is nothing new. Satan has many friends among all men and among parties. Now the temperance party may expect to meet many obstacles in its progress. But fear not, our cause is endorsed by that authority which knows no fear. Individual reforms are never made without abuse. I have experienced this time and again. True earnestness must characterize all our actions. And I enter upon this duty without fear, favor, or affection. In a national point of view, the subject of intemperance assumes a fearful importance. The ruinous consequences of wide spread intemperance to a people governinig themselves, can hardly be overrated. If there be on earth one nation more than another, whose institutions must draw their life blood from the individual purity of its citizens, that nation is our own. Now friends of the cause of weeping humanity, shall we not at once enter into a "Political Temperance Organization." To what purpose can we act otherwise. That such an organization is now the imperative demand, no true philanthopist dare deny. It is the great need of our temperance cause. It is the only hope of the final triumph. But again what do we hear thundering from the camps of political corruption?

Temperance has nothing to do with poloties. Why, look, the very shadow of their countenance has been changed to that of holy horror at the bare thought, like demons of old. Why come to torment us before our time? We know thee whom thou art, the just of God. But do we not know that this same opposition has existed to every movement of reformation which has ever been advanced in any good cause since the world began. Well may the great "Master" stand appalled at the magnitude of his work and exclaim "Who is sufficient for all these things." It is our imperative duty to make use of all the means God has placed in our power to do well the work committed to our charge. We should fit ourselves for it, and be willing to use every auxilary to accomplish the highest good of those who are preparing here, upon this earth, a fortune of eternal joy or sorrow. Now are we the friends of the great temperance reform in spirit and truth, or are we numbered among satan's most efficient advocates under the cloak of religion. Here is food for serious reflections. Are we preparing by precept and example for our own souls as well as those around us an eternity of everlasting misery in the lake of black dispair prepared for the devil and his angels? Or can we claim the great caption, "enter thou into the joy of thy Lord, thou good and faithful servant." "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" to redeem it. The object, indeed, for which he was given was, like himself, infinite, an object which never can be shared, and which never need be repeated. But the office to which God designates every man from the moment of his conversion is meant to be a new donation to the world. The relation in which He places him to the world is meant to be a fresh expression of the same infinite love which prompted him to give Christ; it is to be viewed as nothing less than a symbolical representation to the world of that unspeakable gift. He is not that gift, but is sent to bear witness of that gift, not merely to announce it with his lips, but to discribe and commemorate its fulness and freeness in its own character. Like his blessed Lord, he is to look upon himself as dedicated to the cause of human happiness. And the general good of his fellow creatures. Are not these the plain and simple facts in case? Now how do we, who have voted for "Local Option" stand in relation to this great fact? Let us reason this matter from the great stand point of human happiness. Can we do ought else than to press forward in the cause which through the ballot box we have espoused? Can we vote for any man in whom we have the least doubt as to his soundness on the Local Option question, or upon the temperance question in general? Do we not stand pledged before God and man in casting our vote for Local Option to use all honorable means to secure the object sought for? When we cast that vote, did we consider the importance of that vote? If we did not consider the great importance of said vote at the time we placed it in the ballot box, it is high time we did consider and ask ourselves what have we done. Well in the first place in voting for Local Option we meant to suppress the power of granting lisence for the sale of intoxicating liquors. This has been effected in Centre county as well as in many other counties in our State. We declared by a large majority in our county for local option. And has not local option completed her mission? Most certainly this has been done, and what more can be looked for through local option? And have we not accomplished through this law all that we asked? Most assuredly we have. From whence comes the cry that local option is a failure? Certainly not from the true friends of the cause. They know better. Some tell us that there is more drinking and drunkenness since the local option became the law than before, we know this to be a falshood. The same party that is now endeavoring to make it appear that local option is a failure, are the same party that cry out that there is more drinking and more drunkenness now than before.

Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles. And these are the same parties who cry out moral suasion, but do you ever see them try to make an application of the suggestion? No, never But still they cry moral suasion is the only thing that can be successfully brought to bear upon this question. Gentlemen what in the name of commen sense are you talking about. If moral suasion had not had more influence upon the masses of our county than upon you who are continually crying out moral suasion, we would not have had the local option to-day. Why, moral suasion is the mother of local option. Gentlemen we are all perfectly contented with moral suasion as far as it is in application effective. Now all who are crying moral suasion so loudly are simply in the same garb of morals that the scribes were who charged Christ with casting out devils through Belzebub the prince of devils. Now let us try to illustrate "moral suasion" in the manner and form in which you croakers would have the application made.

As well deal with incendiaries simply with buckets of water, (says C. D. Mason) suppose a fire were set in the borough of Unionville. The villainous gang who did are known, even now they are setting fire to another block. It is proposed to try and stop this destruction of property by seizing and confining the miscreants. But you say "No" water is the only thing for fire. Do not make fools of yourselves by bothering with those men who are simply amusing themselves in an honest, legitimate way by setting these fires? Pour on the water. And on go the incendiaries though your streets, appearing with the torch in open daylight. Fires are kindled faster than they can be extinguished and soon the whole town is in flames and still water is the only thing for fire. The fires of intemperance are playing all over our land, and moral suasion is the only thing. And while we are rescuing one victim, the forked tongues of flames are greedily encircling scores of others And still the incendiaries under the license law are kindling their fires without molestation, for moral suasion is the only thing. Moral suasion is good as shown, even as water is good to quench fire, the more we have of it to save the fallen and to awaken the public sentinent the better, but moral suasion alone will never secure the complete triumph of our cause. The incendiaries need dealing with incendiary fashion. The question before us is one that concerns the whole people as a nation, and therefore it has become a political question. The eyes of the people are sufficiently opened to be ready for action, and shown as we will show them that we mean business. They will flock to our standard if we will but raise it. A national organization, based upon this greatest of all national qestions, will awaken the enthusiasm of the people and success is certain.

Agricultural.

☞ NOTE.—We earnestly desire that this Department of our paper shall be made as useful as possible to our Agricultural friends, and therefore extend a cordial invitation to all parties interested, to favor us with contributions. Individuals who have made useful experiments and yet do not feel competent to write them out in form for publication, if they will favor us with the results we will take pleasure in putting them in proper shape.

Oxen and Mules.

There are many things which seem to be advantageous over general practices, which are often strongly urged, and which seem to be backed by unanswerable arguments, and spite of all their promising features, never seem to make their way to public confidence. We have, for instance, during a long life of connection with our editorial career, noted, seemingly at set times, a sort of excitement go through the whole agricultural press in regard to the great value of mules and oxen on the farm. There is nothing too good to be said about them. The mule is a very strong animal, he will live and grow fat on food that any good manered horse would sicken on. He will live longer, as well as work harder, and as soon, as a general thing his first coat is less than the first coat of a good horse. Then they are bright and easily taught and indeed will do many things that are quite incomprehensible to the spirit of a horse. This is something like what these periodical articles read. And as for the oxen, they are patient, strong, enduring, moderate feeders, and then their flesh is eatable, and a dead ox is often worth more than a live horse.

Time and again we have read these arguments, and time on time we have known of periods when people, convinced by them, purchased and worked with them. But in time both ox or mule got their discharge and the good old fashioned horse took their place.

Just now we see symptoms of a breaking out of periodical talk about them. We are prepared at once to agree with all that is to be said in their favor, but yet we are sure that all who buy them, for general farm purposes will in time sell them again, and go on as before.

The fact is that the horse can do all that others can do as a general rule, and a great deal more in some others; and where there is general work to be done, one that will do the most of them tolerably is better than a great many tools each well adapted to its particular end.

THE OLDEST HORSE IN THE WORLD.—Twenty-nine years ago last spring a horse was brought from Vermont to Boston for sale, being then 11 or 12 years old. Strange as it may appear, that horse is still living, and is now about 40 or 41 years of age. He was purchased at that time by the late Cyrus Reed of Lexington, and is now owned by his son, John Reed one mile from the Lexington depot. Nothwitstanding his great age he has been most wonderfully preserved, and is able to perform light work and is often seen on the road working as faithfully as he did a quarter of a century ago. He was fortunate to have been born in an age when speed was not the only requisite for a good horse, otherwise his bones might long since have been mingling with the dust: but he bids fair to live several years longer. To stand before this venerable horse and to ponder upon the events he has passes through, and to realize he was born in 1833, makes us feel like paying respect to his age, like calling upon the society with a long name to secure him against all labor in the future.

My Answer.

My neighbor is in active business and I am only a farmer out of debt, with a little at interest, bringing up and educating a family of children. He came to me, holding out a note, large for me to sign, saying, "I wish you would just write your name on the back of this; I need the money very much; it will be a great accomodation to me, and you will only have to write your name." My answer is: "My friend, do you really understand what my position would be before the world and the law, if I were to do this? I should instantly proclaim that from a state of complete independence, and without the slightest reason for a similar favor from you, and for no consideration whatever, except friendship, I have agreed to take upon myself the risk of your business, but with the difference against me, that if you lose I lose, and if you gain I do not. I share in your losses, and not in your profits. But not only this; I should affirm before the public that you are responsible when I really know nothing of your circumstances, and in so far help you to deceive others. I give you a false credit. In short I do that which no honest man, true to himself and to his family, can do and be blameless. Will any right minded, real friend, with this view of the case, ask of me such a possible sacrifice?"

If you wish to be certian that your eggs are fresh, put them in water. If the buts turn up they fresh. This an infallible rule to distinguish a good eggs from a bad one.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

——The corner stone of an Evangelical church to be built at Wolfe's Store, east end of Brush Valley, will be laid with appropriate ceremonies on Sunday, October 12.

——The Bellefonte Forgers' association is an institution that should receive the encouragement of all good citizens. The laboring men must be maintained and upheld in their rights.

——The colored school in the old penitentiary building is doing well under the management of J. C. Hawkins, the teacher. The room is poorly adapted, is damp and not fit for occupancy.

——Mr. George Thomas, the junior member of the firm of Burnside & Thomas, returned last week from an extensive trip through the far west. He appears to settle down to business quite naturally.

——Mr. Samuel Lytle, brother of I. Lytle, Esq., and a graduate of the Agricultural College, has entered the Bellevue Hospital, New York, with the intention of fitting himself for the practice of medicine.

——Hon. C. T. Alexander, once a Democratic member of the State Legislature, but in every other way an upright and respected citizen, is remodeling his residence and beautifying his handsome grounds at Sunny Side, ——Fryberger & Grim have one of the largest and best stores in town. Any quantity of dry goods and groceries, at very low figures with polite and obliging clerks are some of the inducements, that our people have for patronizing the above firm.

——A run away of horse, buggy and a pair of able-bodied drivers startled the natives on Spring street on last Friday. The buggy was reduced to atoms, the horse captured several miles away and the drivers now ornament their faces with court plasters and liniments.

——Last week we incorrectly stated that our distinguished townsmen, Wm. J. Kealsh, was treasurer of the Pa. & Western Railroad. Mr. Andrew Irvin requeats us to state that J. C. Johnson, president of the Philadelphia Board of Brokers, is the treasurer of the aboye company.

——The saddler shop of Mr. J. H. McClure is well stocked with all styles and makes of gear for horses. Nothing in the way of harnesses, saddles, &c., can excel his large stock in the neighborhood. His prices are reduced to suit all. Give him a call at his place of business on Bishop street near Allegheny.

——Exhibitors at the coming Fair of the Agricultural Society, will consult their own convenience by making as many of their entries as possible prior to the opening day. The Secretary, Daniel S. Keller, has the books open at his Law office, Northwest corner of Brockerhoff House, just in rear of Centre county Bank, and entries may now be made at any time. 35-3t

——On Sunday Sept. 14, by Rev. Mr. Miller, of Centre Hall, Mr. Jacob F. Steele, and Miss Ellie W. Weaver, both of this place.

This happy couple bears with them, the hearty good wishes of their many friends, and we gladly add our word of good cheer and congratulation, with the earnest hope that their star of prosperity may guide them continually through a lifetime of sunshine and happiness, with never a cloud or a shade of sadness to cast the slightest gloom over the bright, inviting future before them.

——The Tuten Republican is a great hand at cabbaging items from other papers and changing them so as to suit its local columns.—Watchman.

The Watchman "cabbaged" our article about the Agricultural College last week and changed it "so as to suit their local columns." "This kind of thievery is pitiable and shows a lack of good judgment in the Watchman. If the articles "cabbaged" from this, and the rest of the county papers, were taken out of their local columns, nothing would be left but a few "sticks" of questionable personalities and High Street locals. Before he accuses anybody of "cabbaging," it would be a good thing to rid his conscience of the seams and scars that years of editorial stealings and plagiarisms have made.

——Some of the school teachers of the county have organized a "Teacher's Union" for the purpose of adopting some "liberal measures in regard to the remuneration of the teachers' work," as they say, and also to "elevate the standard of teaching."

The scheme is a good one. The school marm and master don't get paid very much it is true, but the modus operandi of these young teachers appears not to be well considered. They call for a meeting of the "Union" during the last week of December next. In other words they agree to teach during the coming winter at the old, starving salaries, and we suppose, after that to make arrangements for the future. This mode of proceedure will make the "Union" one of the most harmless of institutions.

Why don't they say unanimously that they won't teach the schools of the county this winter without an increase of salary? If they can't get the increase there are other localities where a higher rate is paid to competent teachers, and if they are not competent they don't deserve as much salary as they are now getting.

Let the teachers of the county prepare themselves thoroughly for teaching, and then they can command adequate sularies, if not at teaching school, at something that will pay far better.—When a young man develops the qualities of a good teacher, he is qualified to enter upon some pursuit that will pay him far better. But there are many teachers in this and other counties, whose qualifications and abilities have received a large premium even at thirty dollars per month. Were every capable teacher in the county to refuse to labor at the rate of salary he received last year, there would be found scores of upstarts ready to fill their places. The teachers of the county can't raise their salaries in that way. Nothing could effect many of our school directors but the measles or the epizooty. We would advise all capable young men to quit teaching and go to something that will pay better, and to all young, capable lady school teachers to get married instanter, and let penurious patrons and school boards pay their third rate salaries to third rate teachers.

——Republican papers all over the state, are showing up the ingenious, but utterly groundless, argument of John, H. Orvis in regard to alleged fraud in the state, treasurer's accounts. The way he figured up the defalcation was so ingenious and complicated (he thought) that no one but himself could unravel the stocking. Now he finds that his little scheme was entirely too thin. Every editor that dignifies his speech with a notice, shows up the trick in an unmistakable manner. Of course the democratic papers are doing their best to cover up Orvis' tracks by defending his speech. One thing we notice, that is some-what surprising—Meek never says a word about that speech of John H. Orvis. Nearly every democratic paper in the states rolled it over its editorial tongue a precious morsel for the present campaign, but the Watchman never contained a line about it. If Orvis made as good a representative as the democracy claim he has, why don't the Watchman show the people what he has done. Other democratic organs all over the state thought his speech of sufficient interest to publish it; but here in the home of Mr. Orvis, the Watchman, entirely ignores the fact that he ever made a speech. What does this prove? That Meek and Orvis were not constituted by nature to pour water through the same funnel, that they don't pull well to-gether in harness, that neither of them would die of a broken heart if the other should get the cholera, that neither of them care for party or principles further than they subserve their interests to get them in to offices. Will the Watchman say if it admires Orvis' genius as a mathematical elocutionist?

BELLEFONTE, Sept. 1873.

——All parties are confidently looking forward to the fair, as a time for a good week's pleasuring. All interested parties bespeak for the Agricultural Society the most successful Fair ever held in the County.

——A "Merchants Union" comes next after the artesian-well enterprise at Philipsburg.

——Gen. Jesse Merrill paid our town a visit on last Thursday.

——See advertisement of E. Motz in another column, full discription next week.

——The young colored people did themselves the pleasure of having a platform hop on last Thursday evening.

——I. C. C. &c., Whalley of the Clinton Democrat was in town last week but did not honor us with a call.

——On next Saturday the Sunday Schools of Half Moon and vicinity, some five or six in number, will have their annual pic-nic.

——Our friend Lewis Haas, the Roopsburg brewer, has returned from the brewers, convention in improved health and appearance.

——The REPUBLICAN forms are made up every Tuesday afternoon, and advertisements must be brought in before that time in order to secure insertion.

——The Stone building adjoining the new bank, is being rapidly rebuilt. The insecure stone work in front has been torn down and will be rebuilt in the most solid and substancial manner.

——George Foot, the energetic editor of the Centre Berichter called on us last week. He reported business a little dull just now at Millheim, owing to the fear of the country people of a desease which has prevailed to some extent, although the doctors do not call it contagious. This complaint has proved fatal in every case where it has attached children under two years of age, and of older people three out of five get well. He assured us however that people need no longer fear to visit the place as the desease has almost entirely disappeared. The Berichter has improved very much under the management of Mr. Foot, and its circulation is rapidly increasing. That is right, the people of Penn's Valley ought to support their own home papers liberally. We should like to see some good man start a good Republican paper over there, we beleive it might be made to pay, and be the means of doing great good by promulgating the glorious principles of Republicanism.

——The dodges of those who are out of money and want no obtain some without any particular manual labor are various, but the one by which livery stable keepers and men who buy horses of a stranger who sells an animal very cheap are taken in is quite common. It was played on Wm. G. Myers who owns one of our livery stables by a young man who said his name was Graham, one day last week. He hired a horse and a buggy for a few hours' drive and has not yet returned. A day or so after his disappearance the postmaster received a letter without date or signature which stated that the keeper of the livery stable would find his horse in possession of N. Bowers at Snow-Shoe, which proved to be the case, Myers having recovered his "rig" from the person named Graham, it appears, exchanged the horse and buggy with this gentleman for a horse and rode the horse he received to Bellefonte where he offered it for sale, as it chanced, to be a brother-in-law of Bower's. Recognizing the the horse, the brother-in-law was suspicious of foul play when it was offered to him so cheaply, and telegraphing to its former owner to ascertain if all was right, received a dispatchy to bu the horse, that he had traded it off and the party had come honestly by it. He did so, and while he has a horse cheaply purchased his brother-in-law now knows that he made a very daar trade-Graham has made his escape.—Philipsburg Journal.

——A valuable barn with contents was destroyed by fire on last Thursday night. The barn belonged to Mr. Daniel Durst and was located on his farm, about two miles above the Old Fort. The barn was well stored with the products of the copious harvest, with a lot of valuable agricultural implements, several head of horses and about one thousand bushels of new wheat in the granery. Every thing was burned except the live stock. The loss is variously estimated at from $5,000 to $9,000 and is but partially insured. Adam Krummire who lives on the farm and who is the principal loser, was of course astonished that the barn should take fire at the late hour of the night that it did, and after the fire and excitement had abated he set to work to find some clue to the cause. He had no trouble in finding the impress of gum shoes or boots around the barn that attracted his attention. Suspicion was immediately fixed upon a man who it is said, had threatened to take revenge in this way for some real or supposed wrong. The gum shoe tracks were traced to the vicinity of the Old Fort. The more distinct impressions were carefully covered over with boxes until the supposed offender was captured. In the meantime a warrant for the arrest of Jacob Durst was issued on last Friday morning. He was soon captured and taken into custody. It was also found that he wore a pair of gum boots and, on comparing them with the tracks made around the barn and on the road, that they corresponded in size. Jacob Durst is now confined in the county jail to answer the charge of arson.

——On next Friday there will be held in Milesburg a meeting of the "Open Temperance Union" a society composed, as the circular says, "of certain citizens of Milesburg and Bellefonte" and formed for the purpose of enforcing the laws of the Land."

We are glad to announce this movement. The REPUBLICAN has always been in hearty sympathy with, and has alwyas given its aid to, the cause.

We would urge everybody to attend and lend his influence, to enforce the law which a great majority of our citizens voted for.

It will be remembered that the Local Option law was voted on and become a law on the 21st day of last February, a time when political strifes and prejudices did not enter into the canvas. At the last term of court a number of those who violated the law were tried and sentenced to expiate their offences, either by fines or imprisonment or both.

Now a convention has been called for the ostensible purpose of enforcing the law in the future. This is right. Let all good citizens see to it, that the law is enforced, let them do that and the law abiding citizens in both the political parties will commend and sustain the same. There are however several facts that the temperance people should keep in view: That all true temperance men are opposed to meddling it with politics because politics has heretofore always destroy ed all temperance movements that have been mixed with political issues.

That all avowedly temperance men are not such from a proper motive.

That scheming, dishonest politicians, often attempt to make use of temperance movements for political effect, and it is of this last proposition that we desire more particularly to speak. A rumor has been going through the county that Gen. Wm. H. Blair will attempt to have the temperance convention at Milesburg on next Friday, nominate him as a temperance candidate for the Legislature! Of the truth of this report or as to what the convention may do, we are not prepared to say. Gen. Blair is entirely too shrewd a man to presume for a moment that he could be elected. If he knows he cannot be elected in that way, (which he certainly does) what is his motive? General Blair knows that there are many men of both parties so anxious for temperance reform that they would vote for a temperance candidate whoever he might be. He also knows that a great majority of the republican party in this county are temperance men. If he or any other temperance candidate were to run for the legislature as such he would receive many republicans votes. What would be the result? The republican party would be divided and John H. Orvis would be elected.

Levi A. Miller would pe sold out. By whom? Gen. Wm. H. Blair a sharp, shrewd politician. How? By making a tool of the county temperance organization. Who are the republicans that will attend that temperance convention on next Friday for the purpose of being sold out to the democracy by this sharp democratic temperance reformer? In proof of the statement that such an effort will be made we adduce the fact that a letter of inquiry as to the "temperance views" of the candidates for office in the county have been addressed to each of them asking them to send a definite answer to the convention. It is also stated that these interrogatories were prepared by, or under the direction of, Gen. Wm. H. Blair. Now there is no republican in the county that cares an iota how much Gen. Blair, a democrat, interrogates the democratic candidates, but when he steps out of his own party raks and commands that republican candidates shall assume his file of written interrogatories, he appears to be overreaching himself. When he becomes the recognized "Sir Oricle" he should receive attention but until then his impertinence can do no injury. There are many good and true men in both parties who will not attend Friday's convention, because Gen. Blair has endeavored to drag it into politics.

——The Bellefonte Jersey (Alderney) Cattle club is one of the new insitutione that bespeak the great future of our town. Being organized under many difficulties, at an unseasonable time of the year, the stock holders had a hard struggle to move along until the fall campaign opened. The first election of officers resulted in placing the name of J. D. Shugert at the head as president, E. M. Blanchard, Esq., has been elected to the trying positions of Secretary and Treasurer, but with such directors as J. H. Orvis, J. P. Harris and Adam Hoy, Esqrs. the success of the enterprise is insured. The object of this society is to elevate the standard of Cattle, to place within the reach of all a nucleus around which will gather the broken down but aspiring stock and stock raisers of the county for the purpose of giving a proper incentive in that direction. At the Bazaar of Messrs Shugert and Harris, on their farm below town, may be seen the romantic thorough-bred, "Juniata," and other handsome specimens. Neither time nor pains will be spared by this association to give satisfaction to all.

FOR THE REPUBLICAN.

——TEACHERS' MOVEMENT.—The teachers of Centre county are awaking to their best interests. During the annual session of their Normal school held at Centre Hall, an organization was formed, embracing some of the most prominent teachers of this county. Officers have been elected for a term of one year, and a constitution adopted. The organization is to be known as the "Centre County, Teacher's Union." The avowed object of this "Union" is, to elevate the standard of teaching, and to adopt some liberal measures in regard to the manifestation of the teachers' work.

The science of teaching is making rapid strides toward perfection, and is everywhere hailed as the crowning work of the common school system. Despite all this, there seems to be a want of proper appreciation of the teachers' work, a truth which is made manifest by the mere pittance he receives for his services.

There is no profession extant that is of greater account than that of teaching, yet its members are so insignificantly remunerated for their services, as to almost mantle with shame the face of every true educated Teachers of Centre county. With you lies the power of correcting this wrong. Will you support this Union? Will you try to elevate it by your influence? Remember "in union there is strength."

The teachers throughout the county are cordially and earnestly invited to attend the teachers' institute, to be held at Bellefonte in Dec. next. An extra session will be held on Monday evening of institute week, to consider questions relative to the teachers Union.

Any person wishing for any information can obtain it by addressing the President. P. J. Leitzel, Centre Hall. or the Sec., Miss J. J. Tibbins, Bellefonte.

——THE LITERARY REUNION of the Eureka and Excelsior societies of the Centre County Normal Institute took place on last Tuesday evening at Centre Hall. This entertainment was the closing exercise of the normal session for the summer.

A large number of the best teachers in the county have attended the last term of the institute and when the united efforts of these talented ladies and gentlemen were combined with that of the County Superintendent and other instructors, it is not surprising that their closing exercises were replete with instruction and entertainment. The large Lutheran church was so much crowded that of its safety, under such a strain, were entertained. After the opening prayer, Miss Mary E. Huston of Pleasant Gap read the salutory in a graceful, easy manner. J. S. Lucas of Howard delivered an original oration on "National Progress" after which an essay entitled "Silent Influences" was read by Miss Laura G. Barnhart of Roland, which was one of the most creditable efforts of the evening, Mrs. Magee then sang a new and and popular song in a manner that elecited much admiration. E. A. Boalick then orated about "Public corruption" and Miss Bella Barlow read a remarkably entertaining essay on "She hath done what she could." Her opening theme was a well told oriental tale that pointed a beautiful moral. Her manner and voice were very pleasant. J. C. Harper told the old story of "The Teacher's Mission" which was followed by an essay on the jewel "Consistency" by Miss Laura Graham who gives promise of becoming one of the foremost lady teachers in the county. Robert Emmet was then eulogized by E. C. Wood of Bellefonte. The reunion address by W. C. Heinle of Nittany Hall was complimented by all. The rest of the evening was pleasantly devoted to orations, essays, music, &c., and after J. C. Weaver of Bellefonte had delivered the valedictory in fine style, the normal institute closed amid many good wishes, pleasant recollections and universal satisfaction to all. The following resolutions were adopted.

Resolved. That we recognize the County Normal school as indispensible to the successful working of our common school system, and an efficient means of advancing the cause of education throughout the county.

Second. That our thanks are due to Prof's Magee and Rishel, for their liberality of sentiment, and the persevering zeal that characterized their efforts to present to us better methods for instructing the young.

Third. That, in view of the many pleasant associations enjoyed, it is with feelings of sadness that we are called upon to separate.

Fourth. That we extend our thanks to the people of Centre Hall and vicinity, for their generous hospitality.

——Sunday schools pic-nics are more numerous and popular this fall than they have been for a time outreaching the memory of the oldest inhabitant. It is a very pleasant and healthful way of closing the summer Sunday school campaign.

——Schnyer & Son still continue to do an immence business in the Furniture line their establishment on Bishop Street.

——Burnside & Thomas will pay the highest market price for butter and eggs.

——"German Farmer's" communication will appear next week.

——On last week a small party including a share of the highborn aristocracy of this place, for the purpose of rusticating and breathing the pure mountain air, took a pleasure trip to the extensive mining town of Snow Shoe. The early part of the day was cloudy and the air heavy, which threatened to prove disastrous to the pleasures of our friends. But during the forenoon cool breezes swept over the land, the clouds lifted, and the Golden Monarch again poured forth his brilliant rays, giving our tourists ample time and a fine opportunity for viewing the many sights of this enterprising town.

——If we should judge from the appearance of things around Shortlidge & Cos. Coal yard we would feel justified in saying that they are doing a smashing business in the way of supplying our citizens with anthracite coal. Shortlidge is considered one of the best judges of coal in centre part of the state, and is an honest, upright business man who deserves the patronage of the people of Centre county.

——The Express Agt. at Tyrone, a christian gentleman and a great temperance man, was directed by the express company to sell a keg of whiskey to pay expressage, and some zealous individual had him arrested for violating the liquor law.

——Philipsburgers were entertained on last Saturday evening by a sparring match in Potter's Hall, quite a number of women and children were in attendance. Was Doctor Potter of that place the referee? Seems that we heard he was.

——In a town in Connecticut a man died, who had a large wen on the top of of his head, and the tombstone bore the following tribute to his memory, and also to the wen:

"Our father lies beneath the sod,
His spirit's gone unto his God,
We never more shall hear his treal,
Nor see the wen upon his head."

—The Democratic County Committee of Randolph county, Illinois, has disbanded. To remove all possible doubt as to the question of its death, it committed suicide.
